

THE COALITION THAT COSTS CANADIANS

Dear Constituent,

On March 22, 2022, the Liberals and the NDP reached an agreement that would see the NDP support Justin Trudeau's minority government through to 2025.

This callous, back-room, coalition deal is nothing more than another power-grab from Justin Trudeau. This comes as no surprise. When things get tough, Justin Trudeau and his Liberals always look to amass more power and eliminate accountability. When senior members of the Liberal cabinet were concerned about the Prime Minister intervening in a criminal investigation, the Liberals kicked them out of cabinet and out of caucus. When the pandemic started, the Liberals tried to shut down Parliament. When the Liberals were being investigated for the WE scandal, they prorogued Parliament and filibustered committees.

It should come as no surprise that as the Liberals are facing the worst inflationary and cost-of-living crisis in a generation, they are more interested in finding ways to cling to power. When they should be focused on leading a divided nation out of the pandemic, Liberal elites are busy cooking up a backroom deal that would see them stay in power until 2025.

This coalition is bad news for Canadians. It means that Canadians will be forced to pay for a radical spending agenda through higher taxes and more debt. This coalition means less accountability for government with a track record of ethical failures. This coalition means the further dismantling of Canada's energy sector. This coalition means a weaker presence on the world stage when Canada's leadership is needed more than ever.

You may recall that Conservatives warned of a potential NDP-Liberal coalition during and after the 2021 election. Justin Trudeau, Jagmeet Singh, and the media categorically denied any potential coalition; they accused Conservatives of spreading misinformation. Conservatives will be consistent and continue to fight the NDP-Liberal coalition with a laser-focus on making life more affordable for Canadians.

After seven years of Justin Trudeau and two years of the COVID-19 pandemic, it's clear this is a coalition Canadians just can't afford.

I will continue to be relentless in holding the Liberals to account for their failures to deliver for people living in Saskatoon West.

NDP-Liberal Coalition votes down Conservative Plan to Give Canadians a Break at the Pumps

On March 23, 2022, one of the first acts of the NDP-Liberal coalition was to vote against giving Canadians a break at the pumps by removing the GST from fuel.

This common-sense solution would have provided much needed relief to Canadians suffering most from inflation — Canadians who rely on their vehicles to get to work or to drive their kids to hockey practice, and small businesses and non-profits who depend on their vehicles to keep serving their community.

With inflation at the highest rate in a generation, red-hot housing prices that have doubled under Justin Trudeau, and gas prices higher than $2.00/litre in some parts of the country, Conservatives proposed a simple solution to leave money in the pockets of hard-working Canadians by pausing the GST on fuel.

This first act of the NDP-Liberal government shows that they're more concerned with their high-tax, high-debt agenda than providing common sense solutions to keep money in the pockets of Canadians.

FOLD TOP FIRST, THEN BOTTOM, AND TAPE SHUT TO RETURN, NO ENVELOPE OR STAMP NEEDED.
